SCENE 1 INT. OLD MIDDLE-CLASS COURTYARD – DAY – “THE HOUSE OF MOURNING”

The camera glides slowly. A HINDU FUNERAL AT HOME. Everyone in white – Women in white sarees, Girls in white kurtis, Men & boys in white kurtas

SILENCE... except soft crying.

WIDE SHOT – THE BODY – Covered fully in white cloth. Incense burning. Tulsi plant in the corner. A fan creaks. Women sit near the body – weeping. Men stand in the background – teary eyed yet holding composure.

Varanasi. A Hindu household. Adds cultural weight.

SCENE 2 – THE AWKWARD QUESTION

CUT TO

The eldest son – eyes swollen – wiping tears. He quietly leaves the grieving men’s group... and walks toward the women seated on the ground. He sits gently beside his wife. She is crying – eyes fixed ahead.

He places his hand softly on her shoulder – leans closer... and whispers nervously:

ELDEST SON (hushed, trembling):

“W-woh... tumhaare... pita ji kab aa rahe hain...?”

A pause. Then – slightly irritated whisper:

ELDEST SON (strained):

“Abuuuu... kab aa rahe hain?”

He regrets it THE SECOND he says it.

SCENE 3 – THE MOMENT OF SHOCK

His wife’s face freezes. Then suddenly –

WIFE (bursting into loud grief):

“ABUUUUUUU JIIIIII–!!!”

SMASH CUT – GATE

We see a Muslim couple entering:

Father-in-law in black kurta, Mother-in-law in burqa

They stop - Crowd gasps.

CUT TO - an elderly Hindu woman near wife:

OLD WOMAN (panicked whisper):

"Ya Allah...!"

CUT TO WIDE - All the mourning women suddenly: Hands go to mouths, Eyes widen, Shockwave reaction.

THEN- They all instinctively fold hands AND hold their ears:

GROUP CHANT (hurried, terrified):

"Raam... Raam... Raam... Raam... Raam...!!"

FREEZE FRAME - The screen turns black-and-white.

Mourners frozen mid-panic. Face expressions exaggerated. Like a vintage comedy still.

SCENE 4 - THE SARCASM DROP

A sarcastic uncle-type VO enters - calm, dry humour tone.

VOICE-OVER (deadpan, witty):

"Humne toh pehle hi kaha tha... kundali ke ek bhi gun match nahi ho rahe the."

(Beat.) "That's why compatibility matters."

SCENE 5 - BRAND REVEAL

Color returns. Clean. Minimal.

FINAL TAGLINE (punchy, confident): "Astrotalk - When stars align, you shine." "Decode your destiny."

ASTROTALK LOGO appears.

Fade out.
